FORDYCE FAMILY ATTACKED

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

BUSINESS men from Warren and Camden, east of us, and from Nashville and DeQueen, to the west, are scheduled to meet in Hope at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, at the city hall, to discuss plans to complete highway No. 4, which is finished across the state except for 11 miles between Rosston and the Nevada-Ouachita county line.

George Jackson, Cattle Rustler, Shot by Officers

Much-Wanted Negro Is in Local Hospital Thrice-Wounded

SEIZED, LEWISVILLE

LaFayette County Sheriff Shoots When Jackson Starts to Run

Unperturbed over the possibility of a long stretch in the penitentiary, but "slightly" worried over his physical condition, George Jackson, negro, observed his 46th birthday Sunday in Josephine hospital with three bullet wounds in his body.

Jackson, sought for years by Arkansas and Texas officers on cattle rustling and theft charges, was shot Saturday afternoon by Sheriff R. H. Dul, two deputies of LaFayette county.

Cornered in a house near Lewisville, Jackson made a break to escape through a rear door. After the negro refused a command to halt, Sheriff Dul opened fire, dropping the negro 75 yards away with two bullets in the hip and a third in the right leg.

Jackson, officers charge, operated in Southwest Arkansas, stealing horses and cattle and then transporting them to Texas for sale. The negro said his name was at Jefferson, Texas.

"It was pretty easy money—up to $500 a day," Jackson humorously remarked from a hospital bed, "but you know the old saying—if you dance you must pay the fiddler."

When asked of his past life, Jackson replied: "This makes the second time I've been captured for cattle rustling. I served a two-year sentence from LaFayette county several years ago for being a big stock man that messed with cattle."

"I guess I'll get a long term in the pen—but if they give me a life sentence I'll still love Sheriff Dul. He could have killed me Saturday, but he aimed low."

Asked if he had a wife and any children, Jackson said he had none. "My wife went bad on me 20 years ago. Dey aint no good, anyway."

Atkins Speaks at DeAnn Saturday

Hope Congress Candidate Returns From Calhoun Campaign

W. S. Atkins of Hope, candidate for congress in the Seventh Arkansas district, made his first Hempstead county address Saturday night, speaking in his original home community of DeAnn.

Mr. Atkins had been campaigning in Johnson county, speaking earlier in the day at Harrell and Hampton, and driving home for the address that night at DeAnn.

"My platform," he told his DeAnn listeners, "includes legislation to bring about a proper distribution of buying power of the country. I think this is the paramount need of today."

"Forty million people in the United States are without the necessary food and clothing. There are one million children out of school because of want of food and clothing."

"Our president, with the deepest sympathy for suffering humanity, is endeavoring to relieve the distressed conditions that exist. I favor and international, to the end that business may be restored to normal condition and the buying power restored to the people."

City Employees to Attend Fish Fry

Annual Party at Yellow Creek Bridge Will Be Held Wednesday

All municipal employees will "knock off" Wednesday to attend a fish fry at Yellow creek bridge, west of McNab. The delegation from Hope will be headed by Mayor Ruff Boyett. The party will include all employees of the city and their families, numbering over 100 persons.

Most Growsome Crimes Disclosed by Hidden Bodies

Police Search Is Pushed on Two Continents for American Woman

HISTORY OF TRUNK

Tufverson Case Revives Memory of Most Shocking Murder Crimes

BY WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Frantic search by the police of two continents for the vanished bride, Agnes Tufverson, is urged forward by the peculiar horror surrounding murders whose full implications are first known when some locked trunk gives up its fearful contents.

The prominent part played in the Tufverson case by a large mysterious black trunk of the arrested husband, Capt. Ivan Poderjey, suggests strongly to police that the fate of the vanished bride may be finally revealed by the opening of the locked trunk.

She may still be alive, and yet—no detective could forget those sinister trunks which yielded the broken and savagely cramped bodies of victims in the past.

"There is nothing new in crime," Sherlock Holmes said once. "It has all been done before." And that is why authorities are working so frantically on the Tufverson case have turned to trunk murders of the past to see whether there could not be parallels that would help them today.

Many Cases on Record

There have been many, for the idea of disposing of the incriminating body of the victim by shipping it somewhere in a trunk, thus giving time to make a getaway before it is found, is a pretty slim one.

One of the great international trunk mysteries was perpetrated so long ago as the summer of 1907 in the glided surroundings of the French Riviera and Monte Carlo.

Sir Vere and Lady Gould arrived, took a luxurious apartment, and began making friends among the habitués of the Casino. Toward the end of the summer, they tried to inveigle several of their wealthy acquaintances into a motor trip with them, but failed.

Then one day Lady Gould invited to her apartment a lonely lady, one Mme. Levin, who called herself countess. Mme. Levin was always jewel laden and they knew it. Seating their guest in a chair with its back adjoining a curtain-covered alcove, Lady Gould served cocktails. Suddenly the curtains parted and Lord Gould's arm appeared wielding a hammer. Down it crashed on the victim's head and after a struggle Mme. Levin was dead.

She was strided of her jewelry and the air spent the entire night dissecting the body and packing it in a trunk. Then, guarding the telltale trunk, they fled.

Porter Discovers Crime

It was on the station platform at Marseilles that a porter noticed a red stain oozing from a corner of the trunk. Police, summoned, made it give up its ghastly secret and Sir Vere and Lady Gould were sent for life to the prison colony in New Caledonia.

For more confounding and never completely explained, was the Tabor trunk mystery of 1919, one of the most sensational cases in Michigan annals. In this weird case the body of Maude Tabor actually lay for three years locked in a trunk in the basement of her mother's home in Lawton, Mich.

It was three years later that Maude, well-educated University of Michigan graduate, disappeared. There was some speculation about it, but the general impression was that she had gone

Grim secrets have often been disclosed by the opening of locked trunks... the weird stories in which the above persons figured... have helped spur the search for the missing trunk in the Tufverson case, in the fear that it, too, may reveal a terrible tragedy.

Mayor Arraigned in Court for Fishing Without a License

The longest court docket in weeks faced Municipal Judge W. K. Lemley Monday after a police roundup over the week-end which included the city's chief executive, Mayor R. A. Boyett.

The mayor was brought into court on charges of fishing with artificial bait and without a license. Charges were filed against him by Earl Barham, game warden.

The case, however, was "marked continued indefinitely."

The evidence obtained, it appears that Mayor Boyett had applied for a

Pulaski Candidates Curb Pie-Suppers

County Candidates Disturbed by Many Social-Financial Demands

LITTLE ROCK—Heeding the pleas of harassed candidates who survived previous ordeals, as well as the moans and wails of disappointed housewives who occasionally would have a lot of pies and then find no one to eat them, the Pulaski County Democratic Central Committee has instituted a New Deal of its own this year.

Two years ago many rural communities would plan rallies or pie suppers for the candidates on the same night, each being unfamiliar with the plans of the other. The result was that the candidates would try to find themselves eating pie at Sweet Home and Roland at the same time. Or maybe some candidate would "fail to hear about a meeting" and there would remain many pies uneaten.

Several weeks ago the county central committee appointed a subcommittee of five, headed by D. K. Hawthorne, to arrange a schedule of rallies which would permit each community to have at least one and would prevent conflicts. Candidates approved the plan heartily, as did the community-ites.

Freight Rate Cut Beaten in Courts

Corporation Commission Sustains Point That It Is Discriminatory

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Authority of the Arkansas Corporation Commission to suspend the operation of a reduced freight schedule which carried restricted routings was upheld Monday by the Arkansas Supreme Court.

To meet truck competition the Missouri Pacific and other railroads reduced rates in 1932 on petroleum products in Arkansas, and subsequently republished the rates but restricted them to certain freight routings.

The case was appealed from Pulaski circuit court.

In another case, the court held Monday that a contract made in 1932 by which the operation of water-works properties in Magnolia Improvement District No. 1 was turned over to the Consumers Ice company was invalid because of a law which prohibits commissioners of a district from being interested in any contract made in behalf of the district.

The Consumers company later assigned the contract to the Arkansas Power & Light Co., which demurred to the suit instituted in Columbia chancery court seeking to declare the contract invalid. The Supreme Court ordered the remurrer overruled.

Roosevelt to Sail West on Saturday

Begins Last Week of Work Before His Voyage to Hawaii

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—(AP)—President Roosevelt Monday began an intensive week arranging the affairs of state preparatory to his departure Saturday on a long-planned cruise to Hawaii and the West Coast.

Before leaving for the capital Monday night he took up here the last of the bills passed by the recent congress and studied a list of recommendations for two important commissions, the stock exchange and the communications agencies.

He allocated 150 million dollars Sunday night for drought relief.

WASHINGTON—(P)—The forest service said Monday that a new regional office, which will be headquarters region No. 8, will be established soon at Atlanta, Ga. It will have charge of the national forest administration in 11 states including Arkansas. Joseph C. Kirchen is head of the staff.

WARREN, Ark.—(P)—Six persons were treated for injuries here Monday which they received when a car driven by Dave Elliott of Tillar, Ark., skidded in loose gravel and overturned Sunday. The Rev. W. T. Breedlove, 86, Baptist minister, was critically injured.

WASHINGTON—(P)—An 11-point program for the holding of elections in steel plants to determine what unions shall represent the workers was presented to the Department of Labor Monday by the left wing group of the Steel & Metal Workers Industrial Union. The group claimed to speak for 15,000 workers.

4 Accidents Occur During Week-End

Negro Girl Hurt on No. 67 Car Knocks Over Two City Lamp-Posts

Several persons were hurt, none seriously, in a series of automobile accidents in Hempstead county over the week-end.

Sam Revis, 24, was recovering Monday in Julia Chester hospital after a motorcycle accident Sunday on the Fulton highway. He sustained minor injuries, which were mostly bruises about the body.

Particulars of the case could not be learned. Hospital physicians said no other persons were brought there for treatment of injuries.

Della Cooper, 14-year-old negro girl of Providence community, suffered a concussion of the brain in an accident Saturday night on the Hope-Emmet road.

The Cooper girl was knocked to the pavement from a wagon in which she was riding when it was struck by an automobile.

She received medical aid at Josephine hospital and was allowed to return home several hours later.

Clyde Reese and a woman companion, whose name was not learned, figured in an accident here Saturday night. The woman, driving a Buick coupe, entered Sinclair filling station at Third and Walnut streets to buy gas.

After the attendant refused to sell the gas on credit, the driver put the car in reverse and started backing out. It was said Reese stepped on the accelerator, the car shot backwards north on Walnut street, striking and tearing down a lamp post near Hope Star office.

Continuing its wild spurt, the car struck a second post near the post-office, damaging it and knocking the glass out. The car came to a halt, the rear wheel and fender badly damaged.

No one was hurt. Reese and his companion were lodged in jail, Monday Reese paid a $10 fine for drunkenness. His woman companion was released without charges being filed.

It was said Monday by Mayor Boyett that he expected George Sandefur, manager of the city-owned water and light plant, to file charges against Reese to collect for the damaged light posts.

A fourth accident case was reported on the Hope-Washington road Saturday night in which the occupants escaped serious injuries. C. Byers and W. Stroud of Washington, figured in the accident, it was reported. Drunkenness charges were filed against both in municipal court Monday.

Britain, Germany Open Debt Parley

Proposed Interest Reduction May Lift German Moratorium

LONDON, Eng.—(P)—Negotiations between Great Britain and Germany began Monday and the parley is expected to concern itself with German moratorium debt payments.

Some unofficial quarters anticipate that the settlement, if one is reached, may provide lower interest rates on German debts owed in Great Britain.

The same sources likewise anticipate that Germany, to meet such a result, would make concessions and call off the moratorium.

There is no official indication, however, as to how far Britain is willing to go in making concessions; but it is known that the government desires to avoid a trade with Germany.

Man Slain, Wife and Child Beaten and Unconscious

Lee Grimmer, 47, Dead, and Wife and Child Believed Dying

SUICIDE UNLIKELY

Police Unable to Ascribe Any Motive for Self-Destruction

FORDYCE, Ark.—(P)—Lee Grimmer, 47, service station manager here, was found fatally shot and his wife, Ola, 35, and daughter Nancy Louise, 9, with the skulls crushed and in a dying condition here early Monday.

Neighbors went to the Grimmer home after they heard a shot. The mother and daughter were taken to a Pine Bluff hospital.

Grimmer's body was found on the floor, a rifle beside it. The woman and child were on a bed, beaten into unconsciousness.

No explanation was made by officers for the tragedy, since the family was not known to have domestic difficulties, and their finances were in good order.

Dillinger Subject to $15,000 Reward

Federal and State Laws Tighten Up on No. 1 Desperado

CHICAGO, —(P)—New hope for the capture of John Dillinger, American No. 1, desperado, had arisen Sunday with fortifying of the crime laws to this nation.

As the elusive Indiana outlaw started his 17th week of freedom a reward of $10,000 for his capture with an additional $5,000 for the information leading to it hung over his head.

They were offered by Attorney General Cummings under the new federal anti-crime measures passed in the closing days of recent session of Congress. Additional rewards of $1,000 each have been offered for Dillinger's apprehension by governors of five Midwestern states.

Further to clamp the desperado's style, congress enacted legislation making it a crime subject to heavy penalties to assault or resist federal officers and to rob a bank nationally affiliated, with severe punishment if a dangerous weapon is used and the death penalty if anyone is killed.

Another measure directly affecting Dillinger, passed by congress, is a waiting presidential approval, regarded as certain. It would levy a heavy tax on importers, manufacturers and dealers in machine guns, sawed-off shotguns, other arms with barrels less than 18 inches long, except pistols and revolvers, as well as silencers and mufflers. Stringent rules are provided for keeping records of movement of such weapons including finger-printing of individual purchasers.

Under such a law Dillinger would be committing a crime by carrying a machine gun. Also he can be arrested for owning a machine gun in many states under recent laws.

Ex-Sen. Thomas of Colorado Is Dead

Opposed Many Democratic Policies, Including Gold Prohibition

DENVER, Colo.—(P)—Charles S. Thomas, 85, who capped a stormy career as United States senator and governor of Colorado by defying President Roosevelt's 1933 order against gold hoarding, died Sunday.

Though a Democrat all his life, Thomas frequently clashed with leaders of his party. He termed "un-American" the powers given President Roosevelt and in the Wilson administration opposed United States participation in the League of Nations and Versailles treaty.

He was retired from active political life last year when the president called for the surrender of gold to the Treasury in connection with the national banking crisis. Thomas acquired more gold than the law allowed and defied the government to seize his "hoard" of $120.

"I have qualified for the penitentiary and I am at your service," he wrote prosecuting authorities. His "hoard" was ignored, but later his daughter was indicted for gold hoarding, and Thomas announced he would help defend her on the ground that the order deprived citizens of their property without due process of law and was unconstitutional. The case is pending.

Thomas sought unceasingly during his term in the senate—from 1913 to 1921—to have silver rehabilitated as a currency basis.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Tisn't Christmas, But the Reindeer Are With Us . . . We Meet General Johnson and Some Other Notables . . . And Then a Dream Goes Walking.

By RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Washington Correspondent: WASHINGTON.—Today isn't exactly Christmas, but your correspondent must report at once about the Jingle Bells Committee, because he has just obtained the lowdown on it.

I forget the official name for it, but it's known as the Jingle Bells Committee throughout the Interior Department, because it's the departmental committee handling the reindeer problem in Alaska.

The fate of 50,000 reindeer depends on its long and frequent deliberations. Reindeer are the meat supply of the Alaskan natives and the problem arises because a private company claims title to most of the animals.

The villagers claim title to many of them, and since the deer roam free over the ranges, nobody can tell which reindeer is whose.

The company tries to round up the reindeer every year and brand them, but in roundups 40 per cent of the little does and fawns are crushed or otherwise done to death, so what the heck?

Is there going to be a New Deal for reindeer and the natives who for reindeer and the natives who haven't any money and must live on deer meat? You bet! The good old Jingle Bells Committee is fixing it up so Uncle Sam will buy out the private company, let the reindeer roam untaged, and allow each village to kill all it needs for food.

The company can be bought out cheap—after it's audited—because it's in bad shape, since low beef prices ruined its market for reindeer meat in the United States.

There are too many reindeer in Alaska, anyway. The government introduced the first reindeer 30 years ago and they multiplied at incredible speed. They got mixed up with the larger caribou and grew to enormous sizes.

The Jingle Bells Committee plans a federal corporation which will have title to all the reindeer, with natives on the board of directors—including a few Eskimos. (PWA will pay the bill.)

Breakfast and a Wait

Memories of a day's press conferences: General Johnson, meager remains of a breakfast of berries, boiled eggs, coffee, and toast on a table beside him. . . . Leon Henderson, director of research and planning, presiding at the conference, chewing gum.

"Robbie," the pet secretary assisting, challenging—after Johnson admits the newspaper code is the only one which does not bind business units unless they individually assent—"try and get your paper to print that!" . . . Frances Perkins, only New Dealer except Roosevelt who keeps correspondents waiting long after the appointed time. Attempts to create sufficient hubbub outside her office to prevent her from working don't succeed.

A Dream Walks Out

The collapse of a beautiful dream and the departure of one of the New Deal's more attractive dreamers—that's the meaning of the investigation of alleged over-appraisals of land in F.W.A.'s Housing Division and the resultant resignation of Director Robert D. Kohn.

The dream was that you could get property owners interested in self-liquidating low-cost housing projects, involving slum clearance and employment net profit of 6 per cent if PWA only would lend money for such projects at 4 per cent.

Now the nine projects are being investigated, in the belief that they were overvalued, to the detriment of the dream and future tenants.

Kohn, an outstanding architect, resigned after a hot private session in which he accused Ickes of crossing up everything by constant interference. There's a lot to that—everyone who works under Ickes has the same experience.

YOUR CHILDREN

Youthful Gossips Learn Their Lesson on Being Found Out

Said Martha through immovable lips, "I wouldn't go with her if she treated me to ten sodas a day."

"Neither would I," affirmed Laura. "I think she is common. Anyhow they say her father doesn't pay his bills."

"We'll just have to cut her dead," decided Esther. "The way she dresses is enough for me. And that paltry way of hers makes me creep. Always trying to butt in when we're talking. Anyway she wears ten-cent jewelry."

Martha's mother opened the screen and stepped out on the porch. "You are being very frank, girls," she said. Pardon me for eavesdropping but your voices carry a good piece. May I join the crowd?"

The girls regarded her eagerly. They never quite understood what this pretty quiet young woman of their friend's was going to do next. She moved so calmly and peacefully and never got excited about anything.

A Frank Opinion

"We were discussing Anne," said Martha.

"Then I suppose you don't mind my being as honest about my opinions as you girls have been. I have a great dislike for gossip, so instead of saying what I think behind your backs I think I'll say it now. Martha, I will begin for you. You are lazy and untidy. I would really like you better if you washed your hands and cleaned your nails. Besides you are a snob. I wish you could remember that it was your grandfather whomade the money and not you. If Anne's father struck oil maybe he too could pay his bills. My father was deeply in debt when he fell into money."

"And, Laura, it is very ill-bred to talk through an entire movie as you did the other night when you sat in front of us. And Miss Hayes said it was you who told on Bob Brown the other day when he copied on his algebra examination. I like Bob. It's too bad."

"Now, Esther, don't look so frightened. Surely the truth will not hurt you. Everyone seems to know it even if you don't."

"The way you treat your mother is shocking. Listen, you can hear little Pat crying now. He's been fretting all day, because your mother has been busy canning and you haven't gone home to see if you could help her. You never help her and she has too much to do. This Anne you can't put up with, not only does half the work at home but she goes over and helps her married sister with her babies too. Perhaps you don't feel like making an intimate friend of her"—she looked around at the three indignant faces—"because after all we have a right to our preferences in people, but that is not any reason for attacking her. What she does need not concern any of you unless she does something to really hurt you directly."

Curling the Gossips

"Mother, how can you?" begged Martha. "I never knew you could talk this way. It doesn't sound like you at all."

"Why I haven't said anything half as bitter as you have said."

"But she didn't hear. She would never know it."

"So much the worse. It is the behind-the-back talking that hurts people most because they can't defend themselves. And by the way Anne's mother was inside talking to me when you girls were gossiping. She went out the other door across to the church. She came to get more spoons for the supper. Now I apologize to you all, and I think you three had better go and apologize to her. And to Anne."

Which they did. Being found out is the eternal dread of the gossip. These girls needed their lesson.

A half dozen cases of drunkenness, and six charges of disturbing the peace, were heard Monday. Fines assessed against defendants climbed over $100. Some of the drunkenness charges were filed after automobile accidents occurred.

Defendants charged with drunkenness were: Danny Straughter, Sherman Jones, Clyde Reese, W. Stroud, C. Byers, Santafe Moore. Some posted bonds and failed to appear in court. Others pleaded guilty and drew fines ranging from $10 to $15. The case against W. Stroud was continued until July 2.

Charges of disturbing the peace were filed against Queen Huie, Lizzie Rooks, O. D. Darby, Curtis Key, William Chambers, Dazzie Lee Powell. The charges against Darby was dismissed by the city attorney. Cases were continued against Chambers and Powell. Others were fined $10 and costs.

T. W. McCallum pleaded guilty to fighting and was fined $10 and costs.

The final case was a civil suit brought by a Texarkana Casket company against Paul A. Lewis, trading as P. A. Lewis Motor company, for action on a note for balance due of $137.17. Default judgment was rendered for that amount in favor of the casket company.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY

"STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When HOWARD JACKSON comes to the small middle-western town of Starling, KANSAS, he brings with him the reputation of being the prettiest girl in town, determined to win his heart.

Howard, a young ecology instructor, is attracted by Jane's friend, AMY LOVE, but Jane schemes to keep the two from becoming better acquainted. Howard hears Amy playing on the organ one day, calls on her that evening and almost immediately falls in love.

On the way home he is confronted by Jane who hysterically accuses him of breaking her heart. When he tries to calm her Jane interprets his words as a declaration of love. Not more than a telephone "Amy, Howard and I are engaged."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

AMY put down the receiver as one puts down something tainted. She couldn't say she was glad that Jane was happy. She wasn't able to answer. She wasn't able to think.

She shook herself out of it, straightened her shoulders. "He never said a word that wasn't exactly like any of the other boys, not as much as Edgar says every day of the world. He liked hearing me play, that was all. And I'm nothing but a little fool. I just imagined—"

Her thoughts ran ahead, wondering how she could plan her day to keep out of sight and sound of Jane. She must have time to herself to put this all straight. She would go over to Hopsonville for today, on the pretext of getting new music. Then she would tell Edgar she didn't want to go to the dance tonight.

Finally she got ready to go for the music, caught the half-past 10 interurban and discovered, to her relief, that there was no one she knew in the car. The day was very hot and the town, a county seat and small industrial center, was dingy and noisy and crowded by Saturday market wagons and their crowding customers. Amy did not mind for they gave her the privacy she needed. She bought the music and ate lunch in a cool little green tea-room.

"I haven't lost my appetite entirely," she reminded herself with a wry smile. She looked in shop windows and sat for a while in the park behind the old brick courthouse, so that she could go home late. Her father and mother and grandfather were on the porch when she came up the street at twilight.

When her mother said, "Miss Rosa called up a little while ago to tell me that Jane and her young man have got engaged. Any other worded nor evaded."

"Yes, I knew before I left this morning. I meant to leave a note to tell you but I had to rush for the trolley," she replied, adding, "Jane said she was awfully happy."

LATER there was Edgar. He, too, had heard the news. "Jane's grabbed that unfortunate Jackson," he said. "It's all over town and people are sending him wreaths of sympathy. I could weep for him myself."

"Like the walrus for the oysters," returned Amy. "That'll be your girl."

"No, but really I am sorry for him. Jane's got no feelings. She's all impulses and attitudes. I've known Jane longer than you have, Amy. Our house is right across the street. We played together a lot when we were kids and we'd get along fine at first. Then something would go against Jane's will and whang, fireworks! She hit me once with my own baseball bat because I wouldn't let her have it for a tent pole and laid me out cold. And she told Miss Rosa and my mother that I'd struck her first. That's her system. Anything she wants she snatches for on the assumption that it ought to be hers merely because she does want it. She's a poor sport. I never could see why you like her. Nobody else in the crowd ever did."

Amy dragged him away from the subject. She hated her small uncontrollable gratification when he said sharp things about Jane. She hated not wanting to defend Jane even though she did defend her. And she didn't want to hear Howard Jackson's name, Edgar was willing to talk of other things. He was a bit ashamed of attacking Jane so violently and because he was in love with Amy he was sensitive to her moods and could feel her words. But he did not suspect anything more than that Jane had been irritating about her engagement. He was more than ready to forego the dance with the characteristic comment that if they didn't go his white pants would do for another day.

So Saturday was got through safely, but as Sunday evening approached Amy began to wonder if Jane and Howard would appear for the evening sing which was an institution in the Lowe household. It was very simple. The neighbors came in and sat about informally for an hour or two and sang in chorus such hymns and songs as they cared to select. It was neither a faculty nor a town affair.

Amy watched the guests nervously as they arrived, trying to be very smiling and welcoming, but her effort was unneeded for Jane and Howard did not come, nor did Miss Rosa. It became a Sunday evening like many other Sunday evenings, and somehow that fact struck a new desolation into Amy's thoughts. She would go on for years and years and years, playing hymns for Sunday evenings. She would grow tired and old and it would not matter to anyone.

IN the morning she escaped from the house as soon as she could, taking the music she had bought to Hopsonville and started up to the chapel. That would prevent hearing Jane if she telephoned. "But this afternoon I've either got to call her up or go there," Amy thought sternly.

She turned the key in the chapel door and opened a couple of windows to abate the stuffy heat. Among the new music were two intricate pedal exercises and she concentrated on these, working until she had to pause for weariness. While she rested she heard a scratching, scraping, breathless sound and she looked down to see Howard Jackson climbing—with a great deal of difficulty—through one of the narrow windows.

"Oh, be careful," called Amy.

"They're so high—"

By this time he had scrambled through and dropped to the floor. "What made you lock the door?" he asked. "Did you think I'd come?"

"Yes. And I didn't want to see you."

"Come down," he begged. "I'm going to tell you the truth no matter what you think about me afterward. That's one thing I'm going to do. I've thought of it all through this miserable business."

Amy came downstairs slowly, her heart knocking. She was thinking, "I ought to behave as if this meant nothing. I ought to say that I congratulate him—"

HE met her at the foot of the stairs and stood there, not touching her but close before her like a wall. "Now listen, Amy. The other night, Friday, when I was at your house Jane was waiting for me outside, down the street somewhere. I don't know exactly where. Hiding behind a tree, I suppose. And when I came out she met me and had hysterics. She said I'd deceived her, that I'd tricked her, that she—oh, God, I thought I could tell you this but it sounds worse than I thought. I put my arms around her. I begged her to be quiet. I told her I didn't mean to hurt her, that I'd done nothing to hurt her—and she took that for a—a declaration and she said she loved me, that she'd loved me all the time and—and she twisted it somehow so that—that when we got home she said we were engaged. She dashed in and told Miss Rosa then and there. She—she—and I was such a damned fool I didn't have the guts to tell her I'd never said that I didn't mean—Amy—Amy! Now you know what happened."

Amy nodded. It was no use; she could not speak.

"Amy, every word I'm telling you now is God's truth. I never asked her to marry me. I never made love to her, not even fondling. Never. She managed this somehow. You know how she works things."

"She managed it because she loves you," said Amy at last. "You know she loves you, Howard."

He brushed Jane's love away impatiently. "But I love you, Amy. You know that, too. What are you going to do about that?"

"Jane's my friend."

"This hasn't anything to do with friendship. Do you think—after last Friday night—why, you knew then that I loved you. The only reason I didn't say so was—it was so soon, so—so complete. I didn't want to rush ahead—and spoil—anything. Amy, please don't hedge. You know I love you. You know I've told you the truth—"

There was a furious banging and rattling at the door and someone calling their names. "Howard—Amy—Howard—let me in!"

Like someone in a dream Amy walked around Howard and down the chapel aisle. He turned and followed, was standing at her shoulder when she flung the door open. It was Jane, whiter than her dress, her eyes on fire. She looked past Amy and spoke only to Howard:

"I saw you climb in at that window," she said. "You said you were going to the Museum. What did you come here for—and climb in the window, like a sneak?"

together," he told the Western Psychological Association. "I make just one exception. The only wife who makes more trouble than a college woman is a wife who has gone to girls' school."

"A college woman is too ambitious too full of ideals for any man to get along with. The girls' school wives suffer from the spiritual environment in which they live during impressionable years."

"Don't make the mistake of treating your wife like a pal," he warned. "Treat her like a woman."

THIS LAXATIVE

Cleanses Completely

... no bowel abuse

Cleanse bowels of waste matter more thoroughly, more completely with delicious Peen-a-mint, the chewing gum laxative, and you'll get quicker, surer relief from dizziness, headache and other constipation ills. Peen-a-mint acts more thoroughly because you chew it. Just as chewing prepares food for your stomach, so the chewing of Peen-a-mint distributes its laxative ingredient uniformly throughout the intestines to give a "full" more natural movement. This Peen-a-mint never shocks the system nor abuses the bowels. Doctors themselves prescribe the laxative ingredient used in Peen-a-mint. Completely, thoroughly, Peen-a-mint empties and cleanses the bowels of putrid waste. As headache and dizziness go, you feel more active, energetic, fresh. Peen-a-mint contains no richness to upset stomach or to get stale. "Delay" is dangerous—chew Peen-a-mint for constipation. 15c and 25c at druggists.

Doesn't do things by halves. DON'T YOU!

You can't prevent fire from ruining your home, but you CAN prevent it from ruining YOU! It is not enough to HAVE fire insurance—you must have ENOUGH of it! There is no obligation for you to talk it over with us—and you may be glad you DID!

west and died there.

It was three years later that Maud Tabor's sister, rummaging about in the basement of their mother's house, found the body, crumpled into a small trunk that had served as a "hope chest" of the dead girl and contained wedding finery. The body had been artificially preserved.

Mystery Never Solved

The 80-year-old mother of the dead woman, Mrs. Sarah Tabor, was twice charged with her daughter's murder; once a jury disagreed, once the charge was dropped for lack of evidence.

The aged woman spent her considerable fortune in defending her innocence and died at the age of 93 at the home of her son who cared for her in her last years. Suspicion also pointed for a time at Joseph Virgo, a licensed undertaker, who had secretly married Miss Tabor, but nothing was proved against him either.

The aged Mrs. Tabor told several versions of the death of her daughter, and contended that she had herself, concealed the body in the trunk, because she did not wish even in death to be separated from her daughter.

The exact cause of death was never accurately determined, nor was it ever known whether natural causes, suicide, accident or murder brought Maud Tabor to her strange end. In this case the locked trunk never did fully give up its secret.

In at least one trunk mystery, the man sought by police made so complete a get-away that a 20,000 mile chase yielded not a trace of him. And the circumstances are so similar to those of the Tufverson case that authorities are working on the suggestion that Eugene LeRoy and Captain Ivan Paderj may be the same man.

Operation Performed

It was from Detroit, the same city in which Miss Tufverson lived for a long time, that a trunk was dispatched to New York back in 1920. Nearly a month later workmen in the storage room of the American Express company office in New York opened the unopened-for trunk.

Inside they found the body of what had been a handsome young woman, doubled up with the knees almost under the chin. The trunk had been shipped under a false name, and an effort made thus to implicate an innocent man who had been friendly with the victim. But he proved an alibi, and as soon as the identity of the hatched corpse was definitely established as Katherine Jackson LeRoy, police sought LeRoy. But he had vanished with nearly a month's start.

Added horror was piled on this case when it was realized that the fiend who had killed Mrs. LeRoy had performed a crude autopsy on her body, body removing all organs that might have enabled authorities to find what killed her.

LeRoy, also known as O. U. Fernandez and Oscar J. Wood, had gotten away clean. Thought John P. Smith, now Detroit's superintendent of police, then a detective, followed LeRoy's trail for 20,000 miles to Mexico and Central America, and though several suspects were arrested, LeRoy is still at large.

Dead Killer Caught

The name of Winnie Ruth Judd is still vivid in the minds of many. For it was she who called one afternoon at a Los Angeles freight depot for two trunks shipped there from Phoenix, Arizona. Employees, suspicious of a deliver them and in the argument Mrs. Judd slipped away.

When the trunks were opened the dead face of Hedwig Samuelson stared unseeingly up from one; the dismembered body of Agnes Anne Leroi was found in the other. Mrs. Judd, stood by her during her later trial had shot both women in their Phoenix apartment, packed their bodies in the two trunks, and shipped them to Los Angeles.

There she intended to call for them and dispose of them later. After a few days of hiding out she surrendered. Mrs. Judd admitted both killings but claimed self-defense during a quarrel.

In a long and sensational trial she was condemned to hang, but after many months in the shadow of the noose, a jury found her insane and sent her to an Arizona asylum where she is today.

Held for Ghastly Killing

And today while English police seek the murderers of a woman whose dismembered body was found in a trunk in Brighton, Philadelphia police are holding without bail a young woman accused of another ghastly murder. Joseph Hoge returned to Philadelphia recently to find that a young woman he had previously known was now his stepmother. She had married his father, Jacob Hoge, while the son was serving an enlistment in the army.

One day Jacob came home from work to find his son sitting calmly on a trunk smoking a cigarette. The elder Hoge inquired for his wife, and the son calmly said he didn't know where she was.

When the father returned later from a search for his wife, he noticed the lid of the trunk ajar and looked in. There he saw the body of his wife, brutally crumpled into the small steamer trunk. Eleven stab wounds had brought her death.

Backed by Relatives

Young Hoge, speedily captured, first admitted, then denied, the murder when arraigned. His two brothers and sisters were standing by young Hoge, declaring their stepmother had been cruel. But the elder Hoge seems unconcerned and willing to let the law take its course as the son awaits trial.

WHO IS THAT 'BIG EAST WIND OVER THERE, SCOTTY, THAT BLEW IN HERE A COUPLA WEEKS AGO?

THAT USED TO BELONG TO RED FLANNEL HEINZ—YOU REMEMBER HIM? TH SAWDUST POET, IN TH' OL' DAYS OF LEADVILLE AT DUTCH YAGER'S NUGGET BARREL!

HOOPLE IS HIS NAME! HIM AN' TWO OTHER YAPS ARE WORKIN' ON POWDER-KEG HILL, THAT USED TO BELONG TO RED FLANNEL HEINZ—YOU REMEMBER HIM? TH SAWDUST POET, IN TH' OL' DAYS OF LEADVILLE AT DUTCH YAGER'S NUGGET BARREL!

YES, MY MAN—THAT VOLCANO IN AFRICA IS KNOWN ONLY TO ME! UNDER FIFTY FEET OF BOILING LAVA, IS A MOLTEN WELL OF PURE GOLD—MY PLAN IS TO TAP INTO THE SIDE OF THE VOLCANO, AND LET THE GOLD POUR OUT INTO INGOTS, EGAD!

THE OWNER OF 'THE LITTLE PHOEBE' MINE RELAXES A BIT—

BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES

All Worked Up!

I UNDERSTAND THAT YOU'VE BEEN SEEING MY SON QUITE REGULARLY, OF LATE

WHY, YES—SOMETIMES! DID HE TELL YOU?

NO! HE NEVER HAS MENTIONED YOUR NAME TO ME! I FOUND OUT FROM ANOTHER SOURCE

OH, I SEE

By MARTIN

YOUNG LADY, IN SPITE OF YOUR LACK OF DISCRIMINATION, YOU DO APPEAR TO HAVE SOME GOOD, COMMON SENSE—SO I'M SURE IT WON'T BE NECESSARY FOR ME TO POINT OUT HOW FOOLISH YOU ARE

I DON'T KNOW WHAT YOU MEAN

I MEAN THAT YOU MUST GIVE RONALD UP—LEAVE HIM ALONE! DO YOU HEAR?

ALLEY OOP

No Wonder Oop's Up in the Air!

THE VICTORIOUS ARMY OF MOO, LED BY THE DOUGHY KING GUZZLE, HAS RETURNED—COVERED WITH GLORY, LOADED DOWN WITH THE CAPTURED ARMS OF THE VANQUISHED ARMY OF LEM, AND ACCOMPANIED BY A HUGE BRONTOSAURUS, THE CAMPAIGN PRIZE OF THE MOOVIAN MONARCH. GREAT IS THE JOYOUS TUMULT AND SHOUTING! EVERYONE IS HAPPY, EXCEPT—

DINNY

ALLEY OOP—OUR HERO, WHO IS IN A TOUGHER SPOT THAN USUAL, ALL BECAUSE, IN A MOMENT OF STRIFE, HE SAVED THE LIFE OF HIS SWORN ENEMY—

KING GUZZLE, GRAND WIZZERWOWER OF MOO, WHO, WITH AN EYE TO THE FUTURE PEACE AND TRANQUILITY OF HIS REIGN, OFFERED OOP THE HAND OF—

PRINCESS WOOTIE TOOT, THE GREAT MOOVIAN PAIR-IN-THE-NECK.

DAUGHTER OF THE MOOVIAN MONARCH AND—

UMPATEEDLE, QUEEN AND SOCIAL LION OF MOO, WHO LONG AGO GAVE UP HOPE OF EVER MAKING A SUITABLE MATCH FOR HER ROYAL DAUGHTER. WOTTA MOTHER-IN-LAW SHE'LL BE! POOR ALLEY OOP!

By HAMLIN

TO FURTHER COMPLICATE MATTERS, ALLEY OOP'S PAL AND BRAINY ADVISOR, FOOZY, RECENTLY PROMOTED TO THE RANK OF GENERAL, IS OUT OF HIS HEAD, GA-GA AND DELIRIOUS, DUE TO AN ENCOUNTER WITH O' KING TUNK!

OUR HERO, THO, STILL HAS TWO STAUNCH FRIENDS IN CIRCULATION—OOOLA, THE GIRL FRIEND—AND THE CARDIFF GIANT

BUT, ON THE OTHER HAND, HERE ARE THE GRAND WIZER, ARCH FIEND, MEDICINE MAN AND ADVISOR TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING, AND—DOOTSY BOBO, THE DARK HORSE! LOOKOUT FOR HIM, OOOLA!

DINNY, OL' BOY, THINGS DON'T LOOK SO GOOD!

FIND ANYTHING?

DUNNO, PODNER. IT'S THE WRAPPER OF A PACKAGE MAILED TO BABE DIAMOND ON THE DAY OF THE MURDER.

THE DATE'S PROBABLY JUST A COINCIDENCE, BUT—BLAZES! LOOK! WHY, IT'S ADDRESSED IN HER OWN HANDWRITING.

BUT WHY WOULD SHE MAIL SOME-THING TO HERSELF? 'AT'S WOT I CAN'T FIGGER OUT.

HEY, GRADY! JUST FOUND SOME EVIDENCE AGAINST BABE DIAMOND, ON THE DAY OF THE MURDER SHE—

FORGET IT, BOY.

FORGET IT. IT'S ALL OVER BUT THE SHOOTING. WE'VE FOUND THE PISTOL LANE WAS SHOT WITH, AND ARRESTED THE CASHIER.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

A Big Mistake!

I MIGHTA KNOWN CRASH HAD SOMETHING TO DO WITH FRAMING ME TO TEAM UP WITH HOMELY LIZZIE SPARKS

THERE HE IS, DRESSED UP AS SATAN, AND STANDING AT THE PUNCH BOWL! I'M GONNA KICK HIM SO HARD, HELL HAVE TO PICK HIS HORNS OUT OF THE CEILING!!

I DON'T KNOW WHAT IT WILL DO TO MY SOCIAL STANDING, BUT WHAT IT WILL DO TO HIS SITTING, WILL BE PLENTY!

A SMART GUY, EH? THERE'S A LITTLE GREETING FROM ME TO YOU!!

G-GOLLY! MIG'S FATHER... AND DRESSED AS SATAN, TOO!! I SURE PUT MY FOOT IN IT THAT TIME!!

THE NEWFANGLES (Mom'n Pop)

The Events Leading Up!

IT ALL CAME ABOUT WHEN DEACON DALTON, A SPEED MERCHANT OF THE 'BO'S MADE A RASH STATEMENT.

I KIN TAKE MY OLD HIGH-WHEELER AN' BEAT YE, ANY DAY

IT'S A RACE, DEACON!!

NO SIR, THEM TIRES ON MY HIGH-WHEELER NEVER GO FLAT. THEY IS HARD RUBBER.

FLAT TIRE! THAT GIVES ME AN IDEA!!

THEN WINDY KUHN, UP TO HIS TRICKS CONCEIVED A BRIGHT IDEA AND LAID HIS MONEY ON THE DEACON, WITH ODDS AT 10 TO 1

AT THE GO! SIGNAL, CHICK SURPRISED EVERYBODY BY LETTING THE DEACON START ALONE.

I'LL SHOW THAT YOUNG WHIPPER SNAPPER HE CAN'T TOY WITH ME!

THEN, WHILE CHICK WAS TREATING THE CROWD TO SODAS, WINDY GOT IN HIS DIRTY WORK.

A LOOSE VALVE, AND SHE'LL GO FLAT IN ABOUT HALF AN HOUR

AS A RESULT OF WINDY'S SKULL DUGGERY, CHICK IS RACING UNDER A BIG HANDICAP
